SYNOPSIS

They fell asleep on the plane. That's the last thing twin brothers Martin and Christoph remember. When they woke up, they found themselves locked in a room with no means of escaping. A room of very strange form, structure and color. The red, soft construct resembles an isolation chamber. But only slightly. The two assume that they have been imprisoned here, for no reason they can think of. All attempts to break out or to communicate with the other side fail. When a pipe in the wall starts supplying them with liquid food and they start hearing familiar voices, they have to face a shocking truth. This is not an isolation chamber. It is much worse.

„I think it's time.“

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

„From the Cradle to the Grave“ tells the story of two brothers in a state of crisis. Martin and Christoph find themselves in unknown, possibly dangerous surroundings and do what they have always done: Stick together. But at the same time, this situation leads to conflicts between the two, because they are so fundamentally unlike. So trapped in a room with no means of escaping, two radically different personalities clash. The result: A cocktail of doubts, fears, anger and love.

As the title suggests, this is a story of life and death. The exact meaning of the events in “From the Cradle to the Grave” lie in the eye of the beholder. But regardless of the individual viewing experience, one thing is certain: This short film explores profound, existential questions. And turns them upside down.

DIRECTOR'S BIOGRAPHY

Leander Behal was born in 1998 in Berlin (Germany), where he now works as a freelance director and screenwriter. Since 2016, he has been enrolled in film studies at the Free University Berlin. Throughout his studies, he has already written and directed a number of short films. "Von der Wiege bis zur Bahre" (english title: "From the Cradle to the Grave"), his latest short film, was especially challenging. Elaborate set design and unconventional sound design as well as demanding character roles were central to the production. With the support of a talented team, the ambitious concept was turned into a short film throughout the course of the year 2018. Since the completion of "Von der Wiege bis zur Bahre", Leander has been working on a new script.

THE PRODUCTION DESIGN: CREATING A SURREAL SET

For the production, Mauritian artist Djuneid Dulloo was tasked with creating the surreal surroundings the film is set in. He rose to the challenge by painting layer upon layer of colors on two enormous canvases using a variety of techniques. The results were astounding and contributed greatly to the atmosphere of the film. The painted canvas was meticulously attached to the walls of the set throughout the course of over four hours. Only half an hour after finishing, it was already time to shoot.
